

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS*ANA VIVALDI*

Ana Vivaldi, holds a Ph.D. in Sociocultural Anthropology, at the University of British Columbia. She is currently a Visiting Researcher Simon Fraser University, School for International Studies, and a Sessional Instructor at UBC. Her interdisciplinary research brings politics of indigeneity and race into inquiries on the production of space and mobilities, with special attention to the role of gender and embodiment. Her work has a regional focus in Argentina, the Chaco region, and the city of Buenos Aires. In the past, she examined questions of urban indigeneity and emergent forms of interracial conviviality in the outskirts of Buenos Aires; as well as the way indigenous mobilities produce forms of territoriality that link rural areas and cities. My current research line explores formations of race in the indigenous participation in the Argentine military.

MARIANA GOMEZ

Mariana Daniela Gómez, Phd in Anthropology, University of Buenos Aires and Assistant Researcher at CONICET (Argentina). Her current research topics include organizational and identity processes of Indigenous women in Argentina, gender problems and Indigenous People, memories and processes of colonization and religious conversion in Chaco region.

DR. JACQUI O'RIORDAN

Dr. Jacqui O'Riordan is a lecturer in the School of Applied Social Studies, UCC. Her research interests embody the activist and academic and focus on a range of issues concerning a critical analysis of care, gender, childhoods, equality and diversity in local and global contexts. Her research contributions include analyses analysis of care and family carers, focus on migrant children's experiences and care for children, as well as community supports for people, younger and older, living with disabilities.

DR. CAROL KELLEHER

Dr. Carol Kelleher is a lecturer in Marketing at University College Cork, Ireland. Carol's current research interests and publications draw on and contributes to the domains of critical and services marketing, transformative consumer and service research and primarily focus on consumption and the elderly, collective consumption and consumer vulnerability. Carol is also a member of the Institute of Social Science in the 21st century (ISS21) interdisciplinary research cluster on ageing in University College Cork.

DR. FÉILIM Ó HADHMAILL

Dr. Féilim Ó hAdhmaill is a lecturer in the School of Applied Social Studies at University College Cork. He teaches courses on comparative social policy, community development and conflict transformation and peace-building. He has a background in the community and voluntary sector in the North and is Programme Director for the Masters in Voluntary and Community Sector Management at U.C.C.

ANDREA KUCKERT-WÖSTHEINRICH

Andrea Kuckert-Wöstheinrich heads the Research, Education and Consulting department at the St. Augustine Memory Zentrum in Germany. She works closely with patients diagnosed with memory related disorders, particularly Dementia. Prior to working at St. Augustine, Dr. Kuckert-Wöstheinrich has over 10 years of experience in the healthcare and teaching sector, as a registered nurse and educator. She has taught at the Amsterdam University of Applied Sciences, and her research has been recognised in European publications.

PHILIP ESTERHUIZEN

Philip Esterhuizen worked for 10 years as a clinically based nurse educator in an Amsterdam hospital during which time he became associated with the International Association for Human Caring (IAHC) and very interested in reflective practice.

JULIA MAZ

Julia Maz is a lecturer and Associate Director of Student Education in the School of Medicine at the University of Leeds.

JO GILMARTIN

Jo Gilmartin is a Lecturer in the School of Healthcare at the University of Leeds.

ARTHUR LAU CHIN HAENG

Arthur Lau is currently pursuing a Anatomy Demonstrating PhD Studentship at the University of Leeds under the supervision of Dr. James D. Pickering and Prof. Hilary L. Bekker. His doctoral thesis involves developing a framework in designing a digital and iterative games for medical students.

SÍLVIA BOFILL POCH

Sílvia Bofill Poch is an Associate Professor of Social Anthropology at the University of Barcelona. Since 2013 is the head of the Study Group on Reciprocity (GER); she is also founding member of the Study Group on Juridical Anthropology. She is a research member of the European Project “Grassroots economics: Meaning, project and practice in the pursuit of livelihood [GRECO]” (2013-2018), headed by Prof. Susana Narotzky; and she serves as scientific coordinator of the project “Popular notions of social justice in the face of the crisis and austerity policies” (2016-2018). Her main research focus has been on political anthropology; ageing and policy making; and economies of care.

NIALL HANLON

Dr. Niall Hanlon lecturers in Social Science at Dublin Institute of Technology, University College Dublin and Dublin Business School. Niall has a professional qualification in Social Care (DIT, Dip. Social Care) and has worked for many years as a Social Care Worker with people who are homeless, children and young people in residential child care, as well as with people with physical, sensory and learning disabilities. Additionally, Niall holds a BA (Hons.) in Applied Social Studies (NUI Maynooth) and a Masters in Equality Studies (UCD) and worked as a social researcher at the Centre for Social and Educational Research (DIT) and a trainer at the Social Care Education and Training Project (DIT). Niall completed a Ph.D. in Equality Studies in 2008. Niall is the author of 'Masculinities, Care and Equality: Identity and Nurture in Men's Lives, Houndsmills', Palgrave Macmillan. Niall's research and teaching interests include personal and professional caring, masculinities, intimacy, personal life and affective relations.

FELICIA GARCIA

Felicia Garcia was awarded her PhD in 2013 at the Department of Anthropology at the National University of Ireland Maynooth. Her PhD thesis was a four-year field study where she used in-depth qualitative methods to investigate the underlying causes of an alarming male suicide trend in Cork, Ireland. "Coping and Suicide Amongst 'The Lads': Expectations of masculinity in post-traditional Ireland" was re-written as a book and published by Palgrave Macmillan as part of their Global Masculinities-series (2016). Her key interests are ethnography, contrastive research and the important links between cultural notions of gender; men's practices and gender equality, different welfare structures, health and quality of life.

CHARLOTTE TROY

Charlotte Troy completed her Anthropology MA in 2018. She has primarily focused her research on transgender identities with emphasis on negotiating legitimacy within society in India and Northern Ireland. Currently, Charlotte is working towards her PGCE.

MARTA KEMPNY

Marta Kempny is a PhD graduate in Social Anthropology from Queen's University Belfast. She holds MA in Sociology and Social Anthropology from Central European University in Budapest, Hungary. Her primary areas of research lie at intersection of anthropology of globalization and religion, with her main interests being migration, ethnicity and transnationalism.

JAMES WINDLE

Dr. James Windle is Lecturer in Criminology and Director of the BA Criminology Degree at University College Cork. He holds a LL.M. in International Law with International Relations from the University of Kent, and a PhD in Criminology from Loughborough University/Midlands Centre for Criminology and Criminal Justice. He is author of Suppressing Illicit Opium Production: Successful Intervention in Asia and the Middle East (IB Taurus, 2016) and lead editor of Historical Perspectives on Organized Crime and Terrorism (Routledge, 2018) an edited volume based upon the simple premise that historical accounts of organized crime and terrorism offer critically important lessons for understanding and responding to contemporary threats and phenomena.

MARION LOUGHEED

Marion Lougheed is a PhD student in social anthropology at York University in Toronto. Her research interests include (un)belonging, transnationalism, identity, race, and community.

STUART LANG

Stuart Lang is a PhD student in anthropology. He completed his MA in 2017 and is currently in his 2nd year of his PhD, his research primarily focuses on urban agriculture, alternative farming practices, food sovereignty and future imaginaries. Other areas of interest are the anthropology of time and Science and Technology Studies.