GENERAL EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION

JAMES CUFFE

This issue of the Irish Journal of Anthropology draws together a collection of papers; a few of these arise from the proceedings of the 2017 Conference in Maynooth, also we have an award-winning student's thesis from Queen's and our regular Comment On and Book Review features.

I am particularly delighted that this issue hosts an interview with Prof. Douglas Holmes which will speak to many of us in and outside of academia.

I urge everyone to support the IJA team going forward. As I always state, this is a community journal that cannot operate without community support. The constraints grow greater and can only be met with the help of our academic institutions, anthropological departments and good will of our subscribers.

Thanks to the IJA team and wider IJA community who spare their time and energy for the journal in service of the anthropological community of Ireland.
